

How to Comment in the Meeting Doc

Read each other's Trade Journals before the meeting and leave your thoughts. It takes a minute, and nothing you do can break the doc.

Where's the doc? On the club website, tap the card that says Discussion doc for There's a new doc for each meeting (2nd Wednesday of the month).

The timing: the Friday before each meeting you'll get an email with the month's ideas. Comment any time up to the evening before the meeting. Everyone sees everyone's comments as they're added; just refresh. On meeting day, a second email brings all the comments plus an AI summary of discussion points.

1 Open the doc and sign in to Google

Commenting needs a Google account. A Gmail address works. If you see a blue Sign in button in the top right, sign in first. Once you're signed in you'll see your initial or photo there.

No Google account? You can make a free one at accounts.google.com with your existing email address. Or just read the doc and bring your thoughts to the meeting.

2 Highlight the words you want to comment on

Click and drag across a word, a sentence, or a number in someone's journal. A small comment button (a speech bubble with a +) appears in the right margin. Click it.

ADSK — Autodesk Inc

Core thesis

It seems to be a needed software for AI use, and the leader in the industry now.

Other ways to do the same thing: right-click the highlighted words and choose Comment, or press

Ctrl + Alt + M (on a Mac, ⌘ + Option + M).

3 Type your thought and click Comment

A box opens on the right. Type what you think, then click the blue Comment button. Your comment stays pinned to those words with your name on it, so everyone sees what you're responding to.

ADSK — Autodesk Inc

Core thesis

It seems to be a needed software for AI use, and the leader in the industry now.

B Bob Z.

How much of Autodesk's sales actually come from AI work today?

Cancel Comment

4 Reply to someone else's comment

Click any comment on the right to open it, type in the Reply box underneath, and click Reply. Back-and-forth here is exactly what saves time at the meeting.

MU — Micron Technology

Cons

— Memory is famously cyclical: past peaks saw margins collapse within a year

C Chuck

Is this time different, or are we near the top?

Reply...

5 On an iPad or phone

Commenting works best in the free Google Docs app (App Store or Google Play). Open the doc link, and it offers to open in the app.

- Press and hold on a word, then drag the handles to select what you want.
- Tap Comment in the pop-up menu (or the speech-bubble + icon at the top).
- Type, then tap the send arrow.

In a phone's web browser the doc may open read-only. That's fine for reading; use the app to comment.

A few club guidelines

Comment, don't rewrite.

Each journal stays in the member's own words. You can only comment anyway, so you can't accidentally change anyone's text.

Questions are great.

"Where did this number come from?" or "What would make you sell?" is a perfectly good comment.

Be specific and kind.

Point at the exact words you mean, and remember a colleague did the homework.

Please don't click "Resolve" (✓) on other people's comments. It hides them, and the meeting-day email should include everyone's.

Common questions

It says I can only view, or asks me to request access.

You're probably not signed in. Sign in to Google (top right) and refresh the page.

I don't see the comment button.

Highlight some text first. The button only appears once words are selected.

I made a typo in my comment.

Click your comment, then the three dots (:) next to your name, and choose Edit or Delete.

Stuck?

Let Bob or Brooks know, or just bring your thoughts to the meeting.

A how-to for the Lakewood Investors Club meeting docs. Illustrations are simplified drawings; your screen may look slightly different. Shared for club discussion. Not investment advice.